Commentary:

The Fund has produced 33 consecutive positive monthly returns.

August was month where trade fear was the primary driver for markets. The possibility of trade tariffs being introduced initially led to “risk off trades”. Then when the Trump Administration suggested that deals with China, Canada and Europe were distinct possibilities financial markets rallied. That pretty much sums up the raw emotion and trading strategies for the month.

What was interesting to note was once again the bond market was somewhat pessimistic on Trump’s ability to wage a trade war and for that to not affect the U.S., bond investors appeared to sit on the sidelines. They were, however, active when the 10-year traded above 2.9% and the 30-year traded through 3%. In both these instances a rally in the longer dated maturities occurred whenever trade barriers were mentioned and as the month wore on, an upper trading level in U.S treasuries was established.

International investors appear to be paring their holdings in U.S. treasuries, however domestic “real money” accounts and major banks have been active buyers. The large short futures positions suggest that a number of major participants are managing their duration via shorting treasury futures, and as repo rates remain steadfastly stable, this activity points to duration hedging rather than traders taking the other side of the trade and shorting the market.

The Fed is likely to tighten in September and this activity may well cause further flattening of the yield curve. However, this flattening should not be seen as a strong indicator of recession just yet. With a lot of cash about globally and real money buying yield in the longer end of the curve the signs are somewhat confusing.

For recession we would need to see substantial slowing in activity from the current levels. Currently the TED spread, a measure of concern over the riskiness of banks, is benign. Markets are currently of the belief that inflation is under control and that the economy can grow at a rate between 2.5% and 3%.

TED spread suggests little systemic risk

In Australia, August was almost a month of excess. Credit issuance was near record volumes. With a large amount of issuance and with government bonds rallying on fear of tariffs, swap spreads ground in over the month between a basis point to several basis points depending upon the maturity.

Geopolitics was a key driver for the rally in the Australian government market. As the bonds rallied the currency was sold for similar reasons. Local politics also played its hand in markets. The domestic political uncertainty explains some of the weakness in equities and the rally in government bond yields towards the end of the month.

The movements in bond markets were countered somewhat by high issuance of credit securities. Issuance for the month of August was approximately $12.9 bio and represents the heaviest monthly issuance volume since July 2009. Issuance this year has now passed the $50 bio mark.

With all this issuance one could perhaps expect the market to show some signs of fatigue and sell. This appears to not be the case and credit held steady over the month. As long as the equity market does not panic, and we see a positive tone in bond markets, credit should continue to perform reasonably well.

During August some of the more notable issues are below: -

- Toyota Finance issued $600 mio of 2-year notes.
- HSBC Sydney Branch issued $1 bio of 3-year notes.
- World Bank issued the first block chain security.
- Sumitomo Mitsubishi Branch issued 2-year notes $700 mio.
- CBA issued $5 bio 2, 5-year notes.
- DBS issued $600 mio, 3-year notes.
- Suncorp issued $600 mio 10.25 NC 5.25 subordinated notes
- Shinhan Bank issued $500 mio 10-year tier 2 notes
- Optus issued $500 mio 5-year notes.
- Bank Nova Scotia issued $2.7 bio 3, 5-year FRN.

The RBA maintained the cash rate at 1.5% - a rate it set in August 2016. There are mixed views which direction RBA will take in the future and when it will do so.

For some the next leg for the RBA is to hike rates as the economy appears to be growing at a moderate rate - with the exception of housing. If this continues the fear of inflation may resurface and the RBA will have its hand forced to tighten. Should the A$ continue to fall it may also consider raising rates to defend the currency.

Reducing the chance of a rate hike is the banks are already doing some of the work. That is, they raised mortgage rates due to rising cost of funds. Wholesale funding became more expensive for banks. The rise in mortgage rates may also lead to a further slowdown in investor purchases of housing placing pressure on the RBA to not rate the official cash rate.
